Saturday, May 1. 1708.

From the Paris Gazette, dated May 5.

Madrid, April 17.

THE 14th of this Month the Duke of Orleans went Post from hence for Aragon, whence his Royal Highness is to go to draw together the Army in Catalonia. The General Officers and all others that were in this City, are gone for Catalonia, Estramadura, and Andalusia. Letters from Valencia of the 10th relate, that the Miquelets had left Alicant and Denia, as well because of the extreme Want of Provisions in those Places, as because they would not obey the Officers who pretended to subject them to the Military Discipline observ'd by Regular Troops. By Means of Intelligence that they held with the Rebels of that Part of the Country, they surpriz'd the Castle of Guadaleste which stands among the Hills near the Sea, hoping to make it a retreating Place, whence they might make Excursions to plunder the open Country, and maintain themselves easily in it by the Succours they might receive by Sea. Don Pedro Ronquillo, who commands in those Parts, caus'd Don Thomas Salgado to march against them with Part of his Regiment; and he beat them out of the Town and Cattle. Many were kill'd on this Occasion; others breaking themselves to a House for Defence, were burnt in it; and 21 who escap'd the Flames, were taken, and immediately hang'd, because they had shor to Death a Captain and some Soldiers whom they had taken Prisoners.

Perpignan, April 18. The Duke de Noailles will arrive here the 25th. Twenty four heavy Cannon are sent to Roses, with a great Quantity of Ammunition and Provisions. By divers Advices from Barcelona we have an Accounr, that the People there were discontented, because of the Scarcity of Provisions and the Delay of the Succours that are to come to them from Italy, and which they have been told will be very considerable. To quiet them, Care has been taken to import from Majorca 4000 Measures of Corn, which is worth here but 2 Livres a Measure and sells for 10 in Barcelona; and yet the Burghers are not permitted to buy more than one Measure at a Time. They affect to give out at Barcelona, that the Prince of Wolfemburzel will speedily arrive; that they may induce the Catalonians to believe that since the Allies send that Prince, they will not fail to send necessary Succours likewise for continuing the War. The Archduke has nominated three Catalonian Lords to go to Genoa to compliment her on his Part: Some magnificent Coaches that were sent from Naples are shewn to the People, and a good number of Artificers are set to work to fit up and adorn the Apartments design'd for the said Prince. All Advices agree, that the Enemy have no more than 14000 Men of regular Troops, who have only Bread given them, and are ill paid; Bills of Exchange to the Value of 100000 Crowns drawn on the English Consul having been protested. Some Months ago they would have supplied their Want of Money, by laying a Tax on the People; but were oblig'd to desist from it for fear of causing an Insurrection. Wanting Money, they had not made any settled Provision the last Month, either for Stores to subsift their Forces, for their Artillery, or for Hospitals. The Archduke causes a great Quantity of Copper Money to be coyn'd, by which he will gain considerable Profit. He is endeavouring to raise new Forces. Don Antonio de Peguera, one of the principal Authors of the Revolt, and Colonel of the Archduke's Guards, is dead, and is succeeded in that Command by Prince Henry of Darmstadt, formerly Governor of Lerida. We are inform'd, that the Enemy have withdrawn out of Tortosa their regular Troops and Artillery, leaving in it only the Miquelets and 3 Iron Cannon: That they are intrenching themselves in the Neighbourhood of Tarragona, and fortifying the narrow Passages in the Hills of Cabra and Balaguer.

The 23d Instant the Princess of Wolfemburzel went with their Imperial Majesties to the Palace of Schoonbron, a League from hence; and after Dinner to the Church of our Lady of Jezing, where the Cardinal of Saxe-Zeyts assisted by 4 Prelates perform'd the Ceremony of Marrying that Prince to the Catholick King represented by the Emperour. The whole Court were at the Solemnity in magnificent Habits, and after 'twas ended Te Deum was Sung. Then the Royal Bride went to the Castle of Haderstorff, and lay there that Night. Yesterday the Emperour, the Empresses, the Archduchesses, and the whole Court went thither to take their Leaves of her Majesty; who gave them a Splendid Entertainment; and in the Evening began her Journey for Milan.
